ANNUAL AWARDS

NHAA AWARDS NOMINATION FORM

NHAA Award for Early Career Research in Herbal Medicine

This award recognises excellence in scientific advancement in herbal medicine among herbalists, who are at the early stages of their research career in Australia. The Early Career Research in Herbal Medicine award aims to recognise candidates whose achievements are outstanding compared to their peers. Candidates will have completed research within 5 years of receiving a PhD.

NHAA Award for Student of the Year

This award recognises either a current student or a student who has completed their education in the 12 months prior to the call for award nominations and is awaiting graduation, or who has recently graduated and demonstrated excellence in academic achievement, or a commitment to professional development and the broader profession. The award is open to undergraduate and post-graduate students.

NHAA Award for the AJHM Article of the Year

This award recognises excellence in publication in the Australian Journal of Herbal Medicine in the 12 months prior to the call for award nominations. Eligible articles will provide distinguished theoretical or empirical contributions to advance the evidence base of herbal medicine. The contribution may lead to an improved understanding of clinical application, practice, policy, education, or the broader profession.

NHAA Fellowship Award

This award elevates a Full Member to the status of Fellow who has been a Full Member and in bona fide practice as a herbalist or naturopath for no less than ten years, has done meritorious work either in the profession of herbalism or within the Association and who in the Board of Director's opinion deserves such consideration.
